“ Man this shit hurts . Just now finding out about his death and I'm at a loss for words. Dylan was like a brother to me in the short time I got to know him. We met in California and formed a tight bond . He's the type of guy to give you his shirt off his back. He would pick me up from / take me to work whenever I needed a ride . We would always go golf together , door dash together , you name it he was my right hand man. A friend anyone would be lucky to have , and one of the most selfless and genuine people I had ever met. I'm praying for your family homie and I know your up in heaven makin hella people laugh . Gone but never forgotten . Love you dude

“ I keep finding myself coming back to this page to read all the wonderful things people have to say about him.. he is such a sweet soul. Would do anything for anyone, without a doubt. I will never be able to fully express in words how deeply I care about him. I was there for him before he went to Cali , during Cali , and when he made it back here.. and I'll still be here for him even now. His name will be a scarred on my heart.

Missing you a lot , I love you.

“ I'm glad I was able to be apart of your life for the last year. From working together to finding out you stayed in the same complex as me... it was meant for us to meet! You were the friend I needed. Someone I could talk to that wouldn't judge me. Someone that even tho you were down extended what you could to me. From late night talks about women to heated convos about sports. Every min we spent together was full of laughter and good times. Through all your issues your heart was pure and your actions genuine. Wish I could have done more for you. This really hurt me bad. Your friendship meant more to me than you know. I'll always remember the laughs we had. I love you lil bro forever

“ Dylan and I were close, real close. We lived together in California. We shared a life together. He became a father figure to my two children Elijah and Zoe. Dylan became a part of my family. He was a great person, the nicest actually. He would do anything for the people he love and his friends. I was in disarray the moment I found out about what happened to him. Broke my heart honestly. I never imagined I would never see him again. We might have moved fast when we met each other but I see now it was for a reason. I love you Dylan and I'm going to miss you very much! I pray you're finally at peace

“ I coached Dylan in baseball and basketball when he was younger. I will always remember him from not only being a good athlete but for his contagious smile. He was friends with my daughter and two step sons growing up and was always very respectful when over at our house. rest in peace Dylan.
